

Video Presentation

Overview

1. The purpose is for you to engage with some aspect of Cognitive Science, and demonstrate your understanding and ability to communicate about your topic.
2. The video presentation is worth 15% of your grade (and attendance on the last day of class to watch the best videos is worth another 1%).
3. Videos will be on your choice of Cognitive Science topics.
4. Videos will be between 3 and 4 minutes long. Videos less than 3 minutes or more than 4 minutes will lose 3 points.
5. Videos are due at 9:00 am on Monday August 31 (see instructions below).

Grading:

Your video is worth 15% of your grade (graded out of 15 points).

Grading will be based on clarity, insightfulness of content, and creativity.

If you submit your video late, you will incur the following late penalties:

0-6 hours late - minus 2 points (out of 12).

6-24 hours late - minus 4 points.

More than 24 hours late - Presentations cannot be submitted and you will get 0 points on your video.

On the last day of class, Wednesday September 2, we will watch a handful of the best video projects. Attendance is mandatory, and worth an additional 1% of your grade.

Topics:

The purpose is for you to engage with some aspect of Cognitive Science, and demonstrate your understanding and ability to communicate about your topic. Your video may be about any cognitive science or cognitive-science-related topic that you are interested in.

The content is what is important, so choose a format that will help clarify it. Some possible formats include an instructional/informational video, a music video, a puppet show, a news piece, and drawings with narration.
